The people who are giving their THE PARKS OF PARIS time to the associated charity work report that great demands are being made upon them this year for assist ance They are using all their resources, yet find them scarcely ade quate to supply Lima's suffering, destitute people with sufficient food and clothing. The season has been a hard one, and many people who have had work only a portion of the winter are in actual need The silent suffering of these people whose burden in life will be made greater by the unnecessary tax burden just imposed upon them by the School Board's extravagance in expenditure, should be a constant reproach to the members o the board who voted away the neople's money when the people them selves were suffering for food

Wore the law regulating the depositing of school funds the same as that controlling the other city funds, by which the money is kept in the county treasury and not in the banks of the city, school orders would today be sold about the streets in the same manner as ether city orders endorsed, 'not paid for want of funds" The holders of them would be compelled to accept the same discount now allowed by the policemen or other holders of city orders on funds that are overdrawn. The school fund of Lima is exhaustedworse it is over $5000 overdrawn And yet the Board of Education deliberately plunges into extravagance Muette, out at Passy It is one of the of expenditure, and introduces new most consulerable horticultural laboraliberately plunges into extravagance and expensive features into the schools which can only be paid for by Imposing an additional lety upon a are so many diversities of plants that I body of taxpayers already groaning dare not attempt to enumerate them. imposing an additional levy upon a beneath onerous burdens imposed by other city boards equally reckless

The Movement of the Arms in Walking. I do not know that attention has been called to swinging arms in walking as a survival of the quadrupedal motion, but some evidence for this view is that young children, I believe, are as a rule more vigorous than adults in these movements, which are instinctive, and, further, the na-ture of the action is quadrupedal, the arm on one side being thrown for-ward as the leg on the same side is thrown backward, and vice versa, alternately.

As has been remarked to me by a friend, the visitor looking down from the thirteenth story of the Chamber of Commerce, Chicago, sees the movements of the crowd walking below thus projected upon a flat surface, and the "reptilian stride" is most suggestive. Four legs propel faster than two, and it seems not unlikely that swinging the arms for the gale blow her about three miles away. om nooked and named on oesa.

not to pause for a moment if the ship was to be saved. The wind roared and the storm increased in fury. Every pas-senger stuck to his post and worked until he fell to the deck exhausted. Then the women offered to take the places of heir wornout, fainting husbands and brothers, but none of the men would allow it. As the horror of the situation gradually dawned on the minds of the women and children the air was filled with sounds of terror, but above the raging hurricane and the cries of lamen-tation rose the chorus of the bucket

Heave, ohi heave, ohi stamp and go.

All day long they sang this song and fought for life against the steadily rising water Mrs. Easton, a bride on her honeymoen trip, passed bottles of wine to the herbic men to strengthen them in to the her he men to strengthen them in their desperate work. All night long the strug; le was continued, and still the occun gained inch by inch. The women begged, with tears in their eyes, to be allowed to help. They cheered the brave fellows and went when they saw them fall to the deck with white faces and trambling limbs. During the next day the peril of the steamer was increased by the lack of food and water. The hurricane tossed the sinking hull about and shattered her spars and masts. While the tired and sleepless mon stuck to the buckets the sistance. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon a sail was seen to windward. Gans were fired and signals of distress hoisted. The strange vessel, which inrued out to be the brig Marine of Boston, answered the signals and tried to approach, but the Then the boats were made ready the women and children prepared them-selves. They had to strip oil nearly all of their clothes and put on life preservers. Many of the women had gold, which they could not carry with the them. Twoof them went to their staterooms and took out bags of $20 gold pieces, which they threw down in the cabin, haviting the others to take what they plaused. The money rolled and jingled about on the floor, while the two weeping women explained that they were returning home to enjoy the fortune which they had needs in California, and that they would be beggars if the ship was lost. None of the women dured to take more than two pieces of gold lest it might weigh them down.

The men still remained at their work, saying that they would remain on hour until another skip arrived, as the Marine could not take all the passengers, and the women and children must be save first. Among those heroes was Billy Birch, the famous minstrel.

Two of the lifeboats were smashed by the sea, but three boats were filled with women and coldren, many of the latter being infants. The last boat to leave carried the chief engineer. He selently promised the captain to return, but the moment he got into the boat he drew a knife and threatened to kill any one who followed him. Later on, when the women and children were put on board the Marine, the chief engineer, like the cow-
